FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1866.

The United States Senatorship and the Course of J. M. Scovel.

UP to yesterday Mr. JAMES M. SCOVEL, of Camden, occupied an enviable position in the eyes of the citizens of both New Jersey and our own State. When people spoke of him they talked of him as a rising man—a man of ability, honesty, and one whose doctrines were consistent with the views of the popular mind. They thought him a man of principle, and there was no position in his native State to which he might not have hopefully aspired. But, truly, no one knows what a day may bring forth. The man who yesterday was universally honored for his probity, his fidelity, his principles, to-day appears in a light in which one could only wish his bitterest enemy to be seen. His offense may be summed up in the simple assertion that he bolted. To a man not versed in politics, and one who is not a strict partisan, there may appear no crime so very heinous in such behavior; but if the matter is examined in the proper light, no one can fail to feel contempt for the man who for extraneous reasons will adopt such a course as that selected by Mr. SCOVEL. He was chosen by the people of Camden because of his avowed adherence to the doctrines of the Republican party. He was elected by them as their standard-bearer, and when he succeeded in defeating his opponent the declaration went forth that Camden had lent her power to strengthen the Union party. Had he hinted that when he visited the capital he would vote with the Democrats in opposition to his brother Republicans, there can be no question but that he would never have been sent to represent our neighbors over the river.

When he accepted of their nomination he pledged himself by his action to act, on all purely political questions, on purely party grounds. Yet how has he fulfilled that pledge? When the fate of the most important bill ever introduced into the United States Senate depends upon the arrival of a Senator from New Jersey, and when the Union men desired to reap the advantage they had gained in carrying the State, and throw the fruits of the victory in the party scale, JAMES M. SCOVEL voted with the Copperhead members, and by his vote indefinitely postponed the choice of a gentleman to the vacant position, which, but for his defection, would have been filled immediately, and the Senator has been already on his way to the capital.

What reason does he assign for this violating all the agreements of the past, thus forfeiting his word, and losing all that the hard-fought battle in Camden had gained the party? He says he is opposed to a certain man who may get the nomination. That has nothing whatever to do with the case. It was his duty to support whoever received the caucus nomination. Had he entered that body and striven to secure the success of his candidate, he would have done his whole duty. Surely the party was not bound to defer to him as to who should be their choice. Again, he says that he believes Mr. J. P. STOKTON was entitled to his seat. The United States Senate has decided otherwise, and it was Mr. SCOVEL'S business to fill the vacancy so far as in his power lay. But why dwell on these petty excuses? They are merely the alleged causes. They are merely pretenses.

So far as we can see, his conduct can only be imputed to a desire to secure the position for himself. We have had a similar instance in our city government a few years since, when a gentleman would vote only for his brother-in-law for clerk, and the similarity of the cases suggests the probability of there being a personal ambition in Mr. SCOVEL'S action. If he hopes to bring the party to terms by such a course, he will be disappointed. We beg the members rather to let the vacancy remain unfilled than choose a man who would take such an unfair advantage of the difficulties of the party. Although it may delay the election of a Republican, it cannot secure the choice of a Democrat; and the conduct of Mr. SCOVEL will only result to his own disgrace, without succeeding in any of his ambitious aims, or carrying out any of his dishonorable schemes.

We publish on our first page to-day an editorial from the Daily Gazette of Trenton, the State organ of the party, which gives a good idea of the sentiments of the Unionists of New Jersey.

Street Cleansing.

We observe that the new contractors of street cleaning have commenced his work in earnest, and are making decided improvements in the general appearance of our streets. We are gratified to observe this energetic commencement of a good work. There is great need for caution and care during the coming summer. The pestilence is on its march, and we know not at what moment we may be in the grasp of the destroyer. It is true that the most perfect sanitary and quarantine measures have not always served to stay the progress of disease, but cleanliness both in municipal and individual affairs will go far to mitigate the violence and obduracy of the attacks. A remark made in private conversation by one of our most eminent Philadelphia physicians, is worthy of attention by those who have the healthful condition of our city in charge. He says that we do not apply the labor of cleansing at the right points. We are careful to keep the broad business avenues, such as Market and Broad streets, in fine order, while the narrow, confined byways, alleys, and courts are filled with all manner of uncleanness. He affirms that in the wider streets the action of the currents of the air is to raise and disperse the noxious vapors as rapidly as they are formed, and little or no danger is to be apprehended from such localities; but in dark, murky, crooked alleys, where every species of corruption fester and rots, there are no balmy breezes to bear away the malaria that scatters death to all around. It is from these centres that contagious and epidemic diseases spread, rendering great cities vast Golgothas. It is of the utmost importance that these plague spots and lazar-houses should be thoroughly inspected, and, if possible, purified. In some of the streets down town there are filthy dens where crime, vice, destitution, want, hunger, and shame have driven hundreds into miserable garrets and cellars, where their condition is infinitely worse than that of the swine. When disease breaks out in such localities it is beyond the power of the most skillful leech to stay its course. The very air they breathe is laden with death, and it is to such localities as these that the cleansing operations should be most especially devoted. A thorough ablation of the down-town alleys is very much needed just now, for some of them are very offensive to the olfactory organs. Tom Hood asserts that he recognized seventy distinct smells in the city of Cologne; and Bedford, St. Mary, and Little Pine streets are nearly as rich in the multiplication of their odors.

The Board of Health should seize the present opportune moment, when our city is comparatively free from disease, and while labor is plenty, to urge upon our City Councils the necessity of proper measures to keep us free from calamity and death. A moderate sum of money judiciously expended just now may save millions of treasure and many valuable lives. To wait until the demon is at our gates, and then, driven by panic, rush into all manner of needless and improvident expenditure, is simply to be "penny wise and pound foolish." The work ought to be set about immediately, and when the plan is perfected it should be placed in the hands of intelligent executive officers, with sufficient means at their disposal to do the work efficiently and thoroughly. With proper prudential precautions there is no good reason why the health of our city should not remain during the summer in as good a condition as it is at present.

The Sabbath Law.

We congratulate our readers on the action taken by the State Legislature yesterday on the proposition to amend the Sabbath law. The resolution, as finally amended, read as follows:—

"Resolved, That the laws of the Commonwealth in regard to the first day of the week, called the Lord's Day, be not so altered as to allow the running of street cars on that day."

This was adopted by a vote of twenty-three yeas to seven nays. So decided an expression of legislative sentiment in favor of preserving the sanctity of the Lord's day must afford the right-thinking and right-feeling portion of this community infinite satisfaction, and it may also encourage the hope that the effort to establish in Philadelphia a French Sunday is, so far at least as the Legislature is concerned, finally killed. It is, nevertheless, proposed to submit to the vote of the people of this city the question whether or not Sunday travel on the intramural passenger railways shall be allowed. It is by no means certain that the proposition in this form will meet with the favor of the State Assembly. But if it should, then the friends of a Christian Sabbath will have to do all that they may properly do, to prevent that being done by popular suffrage which the Representatives of the entire Commonwealth have refused to legalize. In the meanwhile let them feel encouraged to go forward in the good work with all needful earnestness and energy, by the success they have thus far achieved, and trust the cause of morality, religion, and social order to the virtue and good sense of the people.

INVESTIGATE THE GAS WORKS.—The people of our city will yield a hearty endorsement to the action of the Select Council yesterday, when, on motion of Colonel JAMES PAGE, it was resolved to appoint a special committee of five, with power to investigate the management of the Gas Works. There has been for some time a continual expression of doubt in regard to the fact whether the parties having control of the works were regulating them in a proper manner. The action of Councils will tend to do away with all this feeling of uneasiness and distrust. If the Board of Trustees have properly governed the matters given into their hands, then the examination will only redound to their credit; and they should not only be willing, but should absolutely court investigation. If they have misapplied their power, then it is a duty which the Councils owe to our citizens to see that such actions be immediately exposed and the evil corrected. There is no department under our city Government which is not open to investigation, and we can see no reason why the Gas trust should be a secret concern. There are no mysteries to be revealed. We suppose that the manufacture of gas is not like that of the mysterious "Greek fire," the means of its formation being necessarily concealed. The object of the resolution of Colonel PAGE, which was ably supported by Councilman GRAY, is to examine the finances, and not the chemistry of the Board, and we see no good reason why any should object to such an action.

THE VETO MESSAGE.

Possible Failure of the Senate to Pass the Civil Rights Bill Over the Veto. Special Despatch to New York Herald.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The probable result of the vote on the veto of the Civil Rights bill is still the great topic here. The radicals have ceased their crowing about being able to override the veto, and have found that the postponement of the vote has seriously damaged their chances for passing the bill over the veto. It is now generally conceded that the necessary two-thirds vote cannot be secured in the Senate if Senator Dixon is able to be present, which at present appears certain.

His presence will secure seven votes for sustaining the veto, there being only fifty with a full Senate after Stockton's and Foot's successors are elected. There is no hope for the radicals, except in the sickness of two of the other side. There is, therefore, less interest taken to-day in the result of the action of the New Jersey Legislature. It is important, however, as the President will be found on the conservative side, and there is no doubt on their being able to be present.

The best judges of the position of affairs here consider that there is no doubt of the result, and that the veto will be sustained in the Senate. The President was in great doubt yesterday, but has no fear of the result to-day. The whole affair has taken a different turn to-day, and there is a strong probability that one of the most prominent Senators who voted to override the veto of the Freedmen's Bureau will be found on the President's side when this vote is taken.

A considerable delegation of radical New Yorkers arrived in the city yesterday and to-day in the hope of contributing in some way to the passing of the Civil Rights bill over the President's veto. Prominent among them are several old commercial friends of Senator Morgan, who are not without hope of influencing him to abandon his support of the Administration, and add his voice and vote to the radical phalanx. It was confidently asserted on the street, this morning, that they would succeed in winning him back to the radical ranks. But this evening tells a different tale. Nothing can move him, and the besiegers have abandoned the undertaking.

Some capital was also undertaken to be manufactured by circulating the report that Mr. William Orton, now here, was also in deadly opposition to the veto. Mr. Orton has been a Presidential defender in Union leagues and elsewhere since his retirement from the Internal Revenue Bureau, and if he could be brought to openly oppose Mr. Johnson in this crisis it was considered as at least one point scored in the game of intimidation sought to be practised on such as were thought to be weakened or undecided. There is thus no evidence that Mr. Orton has lent himself to such uses. The most reliable expression now is that there is no doubt that the President's veto will be sustained in the Senate. Seventeen Senators are certain, and if Senator Wright, of New Jersey, is able to be here, there will be eighteen. The postponement of the vote has insured the defeat of the radicals and secured the success of the President in the Senate certain.

Will Cases.

IS SLAVERY IN AMERICA AT AN END? From the Boston Traveller, March 28.

Before the full bench of the Supreme Judicial Court yesterday, there was a hearing in the matter of the late Francis Jackson's will. The deceased, by will, left a fund to create a sentiment to put an end to American slavery. That object having been accomplished, the case now comes up for construction, whether the object of the trust having ceased to exist, the heirs-at-law do not become entitled to it, or whether the doctrine cy pres shall be applied and the Court say that the funds shall be appropriated to some charity more or less intimately connected with the negroes or their education. The counsel for the construction says that they were never in more need of aid than now; that though they have been freed they need assistance to bring them up to the rights they are entitled to.

WILL OF PROFESSOR BUCK.

The will of the late Professor Buck, of Harvard College, has been admitted to probate. There are no public bequests. His large estate is left to his daughter.
